Controlling Buckthorn

If you have a naturalized area in your landscape, or property that borders a naturalized area, you have probably become very familiar with buckthorn. It's the spiky, invasive shrub that's taking over the outer perimeter of your landscape and starting to creep in on your gardens.

Buckthorn is a problem plant because it doesn't have any natural pests or diseases to keep it in check. It also has a deep root system that allows it to outcompete native plants for moisture, light, and nutrients.

Our team of experienced professionals will remove buckthorn by the root, using the most effective and environmentally friendly methods possible. We can utilize herbicides as necessary and as desired, carefully targeting the buckthorn plants while avoiding any wildlife or other plant material.

Our objective is to ensure your gardens remain healthy and attractive while protecting our environment. We understand that buckthorn can be a difficult pest to control, but we have the expertise and tools to get the job done effectively. Give your Client Steward a call for further information specific to your property.
